Specifically, the pomegranate was chopped into small pieces, dried and then stuffed into a goat. The goat was slaughtered and the pomegranate juice was collected to make the wine used for the ceremony. There was something that was strange on the head of the animals that were sacrificed. It appeared as if it had been disfigured. In some midrashic sources, it is described as having horns instead of ears and being large and red. Other midrashim refer to it as having a kind of scar on its head. Shvat 7:10 One wonders why the mention is made of the involvement of Jethro with the sacrifices. Since it is a specifically Parshat

Fatehaven is an endless runner Game that welcomes the players into an intense, fast paced experience; a fully responsive, physics based videogame where you are the main character. For the first time ever, players will be placed in a world where they must improvise, because the only controls are their legs and there are no buttons. The main goal of the game is to simply jump as far as you can for as long as you can. But players will soon find out that jumping on feet is much harder than running on the ground. The accelerometer is used to control the character and the direction of the gravity. Players will need to be quick but also cautious while playing it as they will soon find that the gravity will be changing, players will need to pay attention and be prepared. Gameplay Easy Controls: Players simply need to tilt the device to control the character. Complete freedom: Players are free to make your own choices, find your own path. Players can jump from ledge to ledge, forward, backwards or even up in the air. Shall we play? Players can jump from anywhere, with or without saving in-game. As long as players jump (and don't die) they can make it longer than others but their file is shorter. It all starts here: (When the players first start playing the game, the camera is on a fixed point and the first level will begin from that point) Features Endless Runner: Players will be able to make it longer than others by jumping from ledge to ledge. Players can take jumps at any point of their lives. Challenging Gameplay: Players will be challenged to jump longer, as soon as they start they will find it harder and harder to jump longer than others. Gravity changes with time and, if players lose control of gravity they will be forced to jump from ledge to ledge, jumping will kill them. Leaderboards: Players can compare their performance with others, and challenge their friends and family in a race. Character Control: Players can make their own choices while playing the game, and they can also play any of the two characters that came with the game. Shopping Options: Players are able to purchase items by using the in-game currency called Fate Crystals. These can be used to buy various sorts of health packs. Stability: The game is built to be an open source game. d41b202975

PROVO — Prosecutors will not pursue nearly 1,000 additional charges brought against Joseph Smith's widow in the death of her son. Prosecutors filed a motion Friday to dismiss 465 counts that they had brought against Emma Smith. No explanation was given for why the charges were dismissed. The charges included perjury, forgery, stealing funds and misappropriation of funds. Smith was accused of fraudulently using more than $185,000 of church funds to pay her legal bills. The case centered on a power struggle between Smith and her son, Joseph Smith III, over the handling of Joseph Smith's estate. Smith III was not named in the original charges. The LDS Church in a statement said it was grateful that the court had granted the motion. However, its response to the many questions that arise from this ex parte presentation is that any reasons given cannot be considered. Bridget Wallis, who helped defend Smith, said she will not discuss the reasons for the dismissal publicly. She also declined to comment on whether the dismissal means a defense of Joseph Smith will now be given the district attorney's office. "I can only say what was signed is signed, and I don't know what that says," she said. "But I don't believe that any supposition can or should be drawn from what is in the court filing." Wallis said she personally had a "50-50" chance of winning the case, but even if Smith had not achieved success, she would have been able to defend her actions. "I didn't think we had no chance," she said. "I really believed that she would have had a good chance." LDS lawyers, who admitted disappointment with the dismissal but said they could not press for further proceedings, had hoped the DA's office would opt to pursue Joseph Smith III. They said that he had denied everything his mother had been accused of in
