make a player's health variable persistent so the player will have the same health, regardless of when I restart the program. Also, every time I restart the game, the current player's health and score are reset to the starting values. What I have right now will only make the player's health persistent if I don't run the program the next day. If I run it the next day, it will work fine.

using System;
namespace FinalProject {
class Program
{
    static void Main()
        Console.WriteLine("Hello World!");

WALPOLE, Ore. - Donning a pink cowboy hat and waving a stick, a determined dog named London has won a heart. Buddy the cocker spaniel won the heart of Walpole, Ore., resident Victoria Dillon with his fence-jumping antics on her front lawn. "He just loves me to death. He's never laid an eye on my husband, so he's just mine," Dillon told ABC affiliate KOIN 6. Dillon said she had London for two years and adopted him from a shelter in Lava Hot Springs, which is outside of Portland. A foster dog, Cody, tried to muscle in on his girlfriend, but was quickly rejected. "He was crazy," Dillon told ABC affiliate KOIN 6. That was in May, but it took until September for Dillon to see London again. Just three weeks ago, London wandered over to Dillon's front lawn and began barking at her husband. "He looked at me, he looked at my husband. He put his paw right up on the fence, he was like 'Mm, I just want to be with you,'" Dillon said. "I said, 'You can come down, I'll love you forever.'" Dillon and her husband brought him inside for a nap. Then London was nursing again. "I couldn't believe it because I just put his hand down and he latched on to my boob," Dillon said. In just two weeks, London became a part of the family and has received countless adoring comments from family, friends and strangers on Facebook. "He's just a very sweet dog, he's very loving, he's great with kids, he's great with everyone," Dillon
