The Fox in the Forest (German:Der Fuchs im Wald; also released as The Fox in the Woods, The Fox in the Forests;) is a 1981 German drama film directed by Alfred Vohrer and starring Gert Fröbe, Annette Andre, Eva Mattes and Teresa Oxenford. The film's sets were designed by the art director Günther Ruckhaupt. It was shot at the Spandau Studios in Berlin and on location in Tübingen. Awards The Fox in the Forest was one of two winners in the Best First Feature category of the 1982 Cinema Writers Circle Awards, the other being The Fourth Man (1980). It was also nominated for the Bambi (Best Film) and the Adolf Grimme Prize (Best Actor) awards. Cast Gert Fröbe as Einer Titel Annette Andre as Laura Eva Mattes as Magda Teresa Oxenford as Sigrid Karin Hübner as Frau Waldschmidt Hannelore Elbin-Heil as Marlene Monika Haider as Die Schanz-Säule Veronika Grimm as Fräulein Heyn Ulrich Beiger as Werner Waldschmidt Ingrid Andree as Frau Kohlhöfer Albrecht Schilli as Altenburger Herr Charlotte Schlüter as Kitty Weber Hans-Peter Aichele as Geheimagent Boeh Charlie Chaplin Peer Jacobsen Hans Christian Jaenecke Jürgen E. H. as Kommissar Weber Peter Traus Plot The "girls" of a liberal private TV station have distinguished themselves as a documentary team, but now they are to be dispatched to a remote location for a third TV documentary. The presenter is a famous TV celebrity, a young male journalist who takes his own rather solitary approach to the assignment. However, this is an operation with a rather peculiar combination of motives, because of which they are accompanied by a medium-grade company, made up of a visibly suspicious and dismissive agency chief, by the station manager on holiday, and by a TV cameraman who also works for the agency. They are going to the Forestdorf high forest, an area just outside the city of Tübingen, which has long since lost its status as a hunting territory. In fact, the whole forest is
